TO THE WEST! TO THE WEST!
Before making your arrangements to follow the advice of the "thousand" who have already gone, it would be well to consider what has been done to make the journey to your "Homes in the West" as pleasant and free from danger as Indian skill and foresight can accomplish.
By consolidation and construction, a road
has been put into operation on the shortest possible line from Nashville, Tenn., to St.
Louis, "the future great City of the world."
This line, the
ST. LOUIS & SOUTHEASTERN RAIL-WAY,
has, during the past year, earned an enviable reputation by its smooth track, prompt time, sure connections, and the magnificence of its passenger equipment. Its trains are made up of new and commodious
day cars, provided with the celebrated Miller coupler and platform, and the Westinghouse air-brake.
It is positively the only line running Pullman Palace Drawing-Room Sleeping Cars through without change from Nashville to St. Louis. No other line pretend to offer such advantages, either in distance, time, or equipment. Why, then, journey by circuitous routes? Do not be induced to purchase tickets to St. Louis or the West by any other line, remember that
The "St. Louis & Southeastern"
is the shortest, cheapest, quickest, best and only line under one management from Nashville to St. Louis, and is from 60 to 200 miles the shortest to St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Denver, California, Texas,
and all western points. It is also the "Chicago Shortest Line," via Evansville.
You can secure the cheapest rates for yourself and your movables on application, in person or by letter, to Carriers McCann, Southern Passenger Agent, near College street Depot, Nashville, Tenn., or to the undersigned.
General Ticket Agent, St. Louis.

The Evening Post.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

Saturday, September 13th, 1873.

Universal amnesty again shows its features, somewhat clouded, perhaps, by Mr. Davis' latest public speech. General Joseph E. Johnston, too, seems to feel his position, as he is not willing to publicly speak of the condition of the country, as he is not a citizen. Occupying intermediate positions between the man who speaks forth the exasperated sentiments of defeat upon the slightest encouragement, and the man whose sense of propriety does not permit him to speak at all, stand about two hundred others, who, in the opinion of General Johnston, are not citizens of the United States. Passing by the question of citizenship, an examination of the propriety of restoring all to the privilege which the law declares them to have forfeited, may receive some light from the declarations of two of the most distinguished men who will be benefited by that restoration.

It is no mean position that Mr. Davis has held and will hold in history. The inherent splendor of the office of President of the slave-holding confederacy was greatly increased by the characteristics of the Man and the storm of the Time. No monarch who occupied a throne believed stronger in the divinity which doth hedge a King than did Mr. Davis. Into his hands circumstances placed imperial power, and no leader in any revolution failed so signally to employ the advantages of Fortune for the people he led. It is impossible to believe that the shame of defeat was intensified by the knowledge that his own blunders must have been the principal cause of that disaster—that his obstinacy and vanity had destroyed forever the hopes of his friends.

General Johnston is of another character. A gallant soldier, his constancy and courage almost snatched from complete defeat a principle around which his conquered countrymen could assemble; and which, but for the misfortune of the assassination of President Lincoln, perhaps would not have left the South completely disarmed and at the mercy of the conquerors.

It is idle to refine upon facts. No war ever left a country where it was at the beginning of hostilities. Terms which would have been offered or received while the sword is in the scabbard, or while each side has an army in the field, are not the terms given to a completely vanquished people. The magnanimity of the United States was never grander than when she said to the leaders of a rebellion the greatest in the annals of history: Your lives and property are your own. You shall have free speech and free action; but for the present some of your principals shall be disarmed of the power to again injure me, by not having a voice in my government. The number of those excluded has been diminished until it is insignificant. They are only respectable from their station.

The question is resolved to this: Can any of those two hundred gentlemen be placed in office with safety to the United States? If they have the inclination, it would be very absurd to deny their ability. A government which has the power to keep its enemies out of authority, and then permits them to have it, is simply guilty of an attempt at suicide. Have Mr. Davis and the others the will to injure the United States? Judging from the recent speech of the Southern President, he, individually, cannot be safely trusted with power, if his case is not an exception to the general rule that none who have the will are without some ability. Mr. Davis has heretofore conducted himself in office so as to disappoint the intentions of those who entrusted him with power, that it seems probable that if he follows his inclinations in the future, he will continue to defeat them. Hence, it may be assumed, that the fatality or singular character of the man has only made him powerful to injure his friends, and this prevents his case being an obstacle to universal amnesty. The other gentlemen cannot be inspected as Mr. Davis. They have been among us, doing the part of good citizens, living and bearing with patient fortitude their privations. Let them all then, even Mr. Davis, be restored to a position for which, if we can judge by the importunities of their friends, they pine. And then we can feel that the final act which the will of man, unaided by time, can remove, has been removed—that those which remain are for the elevation and improvement of all.

"THE WOMAN'S RIGHT" is the title of a new semi-monthly publication at Wadesboro, N. C. It does not appear to be an advocate of woman's rights in the common acceptance of the term, but is intended as a family paper. When it gets in full running order, and its editor removes its unsightly border, it will prove, we hope, a welcome addition to our exchange list. J. T. Patrick, editor and publisher, at one dollar per annum.

R. A. Shotwell.
We are informed by the Raleigh News that Mr. Shotwell was "released unconditionally," and has returned to his home. We would ask the News to please tell its President Grant's proposition to Shotwell, that he refused. The people are desirous to know of the President's anxiety, and his backdown before Mr. Shotwell's indignant refusal. It will be a charming addition to the history of the times—if it happened.

The days of kluksing are passed in North Carolina, we hope, and we are perfectly satisfied to have this young man released; but we do not admire the glorification some of our contemporaries bestow upon members of the Klan. It seems to us to be uncalled for, and calculated to do harm.

The Piedmont Press says that Kirk was a deserter from the U. S. Army, and evidently grieves thereat. It did give him credit for being true to the Federal, but alas he wasn't! And then the Press says: "So it will be seen that Grant will reward even deserters from the U. S. A., if they are of the right politics." Of course, the President knows of all the deserters from the army, and being a little more than human, he can read men's hearts, and always appoint scoundrels. The President of the United States makes about one appointment in a hundred, but is blamed for all! This is so just to the administration! We heard a man say last Fall that he couldn't vote for Gen. Grant for President because there was an inspector in the Custom House he didn't like, and Grant ought not to keep such a man there! This is about on a par with the Press' strictures.

EDITORIAL BUDGET.

A large gathering of colored people assembled Wednesday at Starr's Grove, New Jersey, a short distance from Camden, for the purpose of making arrangements for a demonstration of the colored citizens at the American Centennial celebration. A number of distinguished gentlemen were present upon the stand. A band of music enlivened the proceedings. The Washington Republican gives the following particulars:

Mr. J. P. Sampson, of Washington, D. C., formerly of this city, was the orator of the day, and he acquitted himself with marked credit.

"Mr. Sampson said the proposition to unite in commemorating this event is opposed by many of our people on the ground that the success of the Revolution was no benefit to the colored people. From the inception of the republic the best interests of the negro, politically, morally and intellectually, have been, and are now, inseparably connected with the growth, the success, the perpetuity and the union of these States. The Declaration of Independence, the Mecklenburg document, the original unamended Constitution of the thirteen colonies at the time of the confederation, both in letter and spirit were opposed to human slavery. Every article of the instrument, while not committed, points to its extinction, and foreshadowed the complete enfranchisement of the colored people. When the nation's life was imperiled the negro helped to save it, and was rewarded with the elective franchise and equal rights before the law. Here the oppressed of every nation find an asylum wherein they can enjoy all the rights of men. If these millions of citizens of foreign birth can find cause for singing praises to the Lord on the centennial birth year of the nation, why should we, who have suffered everything to make the liberty of the American Union more complete, not clasp hands with our fellow-citizens and let the offering be unanimous? We propose to do this as colored men and as American citizens."

Mr. Sampson concluded as follows: "When we consider, however, the cause of our condition and revert to that dark and dismal hour in the history of American States when legislation in the interest of the negro had no security in public sentiment; when he was driven, hunted, mobbed in the paths of civil life, and stripped of every immunity common to man, we, above all others, have cause to congratulate the country and the American people over the fact that, in the Union, by the Constitution and the flag, the majesty and dignity of the law has been vindicated; that by our own achievement, shoulder to shoulder with the whites, we have demonstrated the doctrine that the Government is a reality, and that its principles are secure in the universal suffrage of the people; that we hear no more the plaintive songs about the rice fields along the parched banks of the polluted rivers, crying unto God for deliverance and revenge; that from the highest mountain peaks down the ranges to the lowest valley, not another slave treads the soil of our country; that the principles we celebrate—a common father, a common destiny—are the emaculate ensign of the flag that overshadows a free and happy people."

"Mr. Sampson suggested as a free-will offering in 1876, that the colored people of the United States erect a monument at Washington to the memory of John Brown."

ple are secure in the universal suffrage of the people; that we hear no more the plaintive songs about the rice fields along the parched banks of the polluted rivers, crying unto God for deliverance and revenge; that from the highest mountain peaks down the ranges to the lowest valley, not another slave treads the soil of our country; that the principles we celebrate—a common father, a common destiny—are the emaculate ensign of the flag that overshadows a free and happy people."
